Executive Summary of Self Assessment Reports

BNU strives hard to deliver quality education and has never compromised on its quality standards. Quality Assurance Department (QA) was setup in BNU in September 2005 as per directives of HEC and since then has actively worked for the quality of all academic programs offered at BNU. One of the important steps in this process is the Self Assessment of the Academic Programs.

Self-Assessment Report (SAR) is an effective tool in measuring and monitoring the outcome of a program. This is employed in Degree Awarding Institutes of Pakistan to identify strengths and weaknesses of the degree programs. Self Assessment Reports are prepared at the end of the assessment cycle of all academic programs at Beaconhouse National University (BNU).

QA department at BNU attempts to furnish the requisite information to complete Self Assessment Report in the light of certain criteria and standards as spelled out in the Self Assessment Manual prepared by HEC.

To complete the second cycle of Assessment in the year 2019-2021, fifteen degree programs were selected for Self Assessment, evaluation and improvements.

Objectives

Objectives of the Self Assessment report are:

1. To improve and maintain academic standards.
2. To verify that existing programs meet their objectives and institutional goals.
3. To provide feedback for the academic program.
4. To identify areas requiring improvements in order to achieve objectives through desired outcomes.

Execution of Self Assessment Process:

Presentations on the preparation of Self Assessment Report (SAR) were arranged for all Schools and faculty members of the selected program. This also served to explain the Self Assessment process and also a soft and hard copy of self assessment manual were also provided to further aid the process.

To initiate the SAR process, the Dean appoints the Program Team and Assessment Team Members to prepare the report in the subsequent weeks. Once completed, the Report is submitted to the Assessment team and QA department. The Assessment Team, accompanied with GM (QA) review the report with Dean and Program Team Members and concerned faculty.

The program weaknesses and strengths are identified in the final meeting. Solutions and Implementation plans are prepared based on the discussions. The following are discussed.

- a. Assessment Team findings
- b. Corrective Actions required
- c. Responsible Body for corrective actions
- d. Implementation Date

The recommended target dates to complete the tasks observed by Assessment Team, were approved by Vice Chancellor.

At the completion of Self Assessment cycle, QA submitted soft copy of all SAR to HEC for review and record.

INTRODUCTION

Department of Liberal Arts

The flagship department of the Beaconhouse National University offers a unique interdisciplinary program in Liberal Studies that combines the best of social sciences and humanities. The program includes courses from multiple academic disciplines including anthropology, gender studies, history, literature, philosophy, political science, and sociology. The first year of foundation courses is designed to help students develop the essential skills of critical thinking, analytical reasoning, and effective communication through the written and spoken medium. After exploring the introductory level social sciences and humanities courses the students are encouraged pursue courses offered by the department based on their primary academic interests. The program has a strong research focus and the students are given a rigorous training in various research methodologies. This culminates in a senior thesis project in the final year which serves as the capstone for every student's academic endeavor.

The primary impulse inspiring this step in our academic endeavors is the need to create and foster an academic agenda that creatively and constructively responds to the cultural, economic, political and institutional challenges of the country. Since our inquiry is anchored around questions like who are we, what is our history, how do we live in and with the world today, how do we live with others to find peace and prosperity, this initiative aims to cultivate an uninhibited spirit of inquiry in young minds by opening up new vistas of current thinking and action.

We promise to help our students grow into intellectually insightful and cosmopolitan individuals, fully cognizant of the civic obligations, national and transnational challenges, and eager to contribute towards a world that values pluralism and celebrates diversity. This degree will give our youth a wonderful opportunity to put the global knowledge into local practice, and while doing so transform the self and the society Apart from taking core courses in the Department of Liberal Arts, students will be encouraged to avail rich and unparalleled academic resources offered by the other BNU schools. Elective courses in fine arts and design studies, architecture, psychology, education, journalism and film/television studies will be an integral component of our pedagogy and methodology. This degree is also highly suitable for students wanting to discover their moorings before pursuing higher education in law, business studies, social sciences and other vocations.

Criterion 1: Program Mission, Objectives and Outcomes

Standard 1-1 The program must have documented measurable objectives that support institution mission statements.

INSTITUTION MISSION STATEMENT

“A truly national higher-education institution, emerging as a world-class Liberal Arts University with a merit-driven, need-based recruitment and admission policy at all levels; offering modern curricula in a range of conventional and new disciplines; while preserving the history and culture of Pakistani society; enriching the overall intellectual growth of a student through interaction and professional excellence.”

PROGRAM MISSION STATEMENT

“Our Mission is to equip our students with the requisite skills to arrive at rationally informed judgments based on independent analysis and critical thinking. We encourage and guide our students to make the best of global knowledge by analyzing it in the context of local cultures and experiences. Liberal Studies aims to foster an environment where the students not handed the answers but the tools to pursue the questions. We don't teach our students what to think but how to think.”

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

- i. To create and foster an academic agenda that creatively and constructively responds to the cultural, economic, political and institutional challenges of the country
- ii. To cultivate the sense of inquiry in young minds enabling them to ask questions like who are we, what is our history, how do we live in and with the world today, how do we live with others to find peace and prosperity.

- iv. To provide students with opportunities for research and critical reflection about social and global issues.

Program Objective's Assessment

The following table shows how each of the above program objectives is measured and the actions taken as a result of these measurements.

The three tools for assessments of program objectives are:

1. Employer Survey
2. Alumni Survey
3. Graduating Students Survey

Objectives:	How Measured:	When Measured:	Improvement Identified:	Improvement Made:
1	Graduating Students Survey	Within One year of Graduation	More courses on gender & Philosophy to be included ,Instructors should stay longer in BNU rather than leaving for other opportunities	Introduction of courses on the classical traditions, literary and critical theory ,contemporary trends in gender and philosophy

3	Employer Survey	Within One year of Graduation	NIL	NIL

Standard 1-2: The program must have documented outcomes for graduating students. It must be demonstrated that the outcomes support the program objectives and that graduating students are capable of performing these outcomes.

PROGRAM OUTCOMES

Our primary goal is to help our students to make the best use of their time in a liberal arts institution by becoming fully cognizant of the civic obligations, national and transnational challenges, and effectively contribute towards a world that values pluralism and celebrates diversity.

Instructor: Dr Kamran Bashir

Office: SLASS Room 113

Introduction to the Course

This course aims to study how humans live in groups, organize themselves to serve each other, and how they think about this process of organizing effectively. The course examines the history of political thought and the questions it raises about the design of the political and social order. It considers the ways in which thinkers have responded to the particular political problems of their day, and the ways in which they contribute to a broader conversation about human good and needs, justice, democracy, and the proper relationship of the individual to the state. Our aim will be to understand the strengths and weaknesses of various regimes and philosophical approaches in order to gain a critical perspective on our own. We will study thinkers in the history of western political thought such as Plato, Aristotle, Machiavelli, Hobbes, Locke, Rousseau, Marx, and Tocqueville. In addition, we would also focus on non-Western intellectual traditions such as Islamic and Chinese political thought. Through lectures and in-class work, we will also explore political systems in different countries of the world, including world constitutions.

During the course, we will deal with the questions underlying political thought such as:

- How can we as humans, given our nature and dispositions, best achieve the good life?
- How can we balance the claims of the individual with the well-being of the entire community?
- To what extent is human behavior shaped by environment and culture?
- Are there some constants, such as rationality and an innate moral sense, that distinguish humans in their efforts to live in community?

- Or are we motivated primarily by base passions and selfish predispositions that must be controlled before any sort of collective social existence is possible?

Introduction to the Course

Religion is all around us. It not only influences and shapes our individual lives, it also has a strong influence on the social, political, and economic spheres in our collective lives. The course draws upon all the world religions, including Abrahamic traditions. The course aims to study three questions about religion in detail:

- 1) How histories of different religions and their foundational texts illustrate the complexity of understanding the phenomenon we call religion?
- 2) What are the issues discussed in various debates and controversies in which religious ideas play the key role? In other words, how do religious positions on individual and collective matters are debated in public arena?
- 3) What role does it play in society, including the question of what are the personal and collective needs that religion fulfills? While studying this aspect of religion, we will also look at how religion has been theorized in the academy, in particular western secular academy. For instance, we will discuss the question: What is religion? We may discuss cognitive and social theories of religion in this category. In short, we will discuss theory and method in studying religion.

The course will also draw upon interesting and seminal events in the history of world religions. It will also discuss the history of the discipline of religious studies in the academy.

Department of Liberal Arts

Email: kamran.bashir@bnu.edu.pk

Office: SLASS 113

Course Description

“Anthropology can be defined as the comparative study of humans, their societies and their cultural worlds. It simultaneously explores human diversity and what it is that all human beings have in common.” This course introduces both the subject-matter of social anthropology and an anthropological way of thinking. The comparative study of society and culture is a fundamental intellectual activity with important implications for other forms of engagement with the world.

Through the study of different societies, we learn something essential not only about other people’s worlds, but also about ourselves. This course will provide a framework for analyzing diverse facets of human experience such as gender, ethnicity, language, politics, economics, communication, and art.

Learning Outcomes

At the end of the course, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate mastery of basic socio-cultural anthropology vocabulary words and the analytical ideas that underlie their usage
- Apply anthropological methods of inquiry to cultural data while engaging in cultural relativism
- Contextually recall case studies from around the world to demonstrate the range of human variability in the arenas of traditional anthropological inquiry (e.g., kinship, economics, politics, religion, linguistics)
- Define culture, and articulate its relationship to the concept of social identity.
- Display familiarity with a variety of anthropologists and their contributions to the discipline.

❖ Comedy in Literature

Spring 2020

Credit Hours: 3

Course Code: DLA-236

Course Description

This course is designed around analyzing how comedy is characterized on the fictional page and the stage. And what might the comic teach us about the self and culture(s), especially when we come to understand its patterns of transgression as confounding social norms through jokes and laughter? Tracking a history of comedy, beginning with the first Greek humorist, Aristophanes, we will traverse genres, periods and cultures to reflect on various types of humor: satire, farce, slapstick, love, and parody. You will read how that laughter informs cultural ideologies and constructs social identities. How does comedy—with a focus on gender and the body—comment on politics, philosophy, and other socio-cultural topics.

Reflecting upon a sampling of a wide range of comedy—that is, beginning with its origin and tracking its transformations through time and cultures to contemporary forms—we will partake in an investigation that addresses the following: Where did comedy originate? What is its relation to tragedy? Is comedy thus universal and timeless or is it culture-gender-experience-specific? What does comedy tell us about the culture from which it arises? What exactly is comedy's purpose? Does comedy have its own language, rules, or system? Does comedy happen or is it constructed? Why do we laugh and what do we laugh at? Does laughter thus define comedy and is the person laughing hold as much agency as the comedian? In short

1. What are the main features of comedy? Which features have remained constant since the earliest dramatic productions? Which features have changed over time?
2. What did writers of comedy in different times and places think about their craft?
3. What techniques can be used to create a successful comedy?
4. What role does audience play in the construction of a comedy?
5. What makes people laugh? What makes something funny?

Course Outcomes

- Read and analyze rhetorically (primary sources) comedy from Classical through modern times
- Understand the cultural contexts within which literature arises
- Synthesize their analyses verbally and in writing through class discussion, groupwork, presentations, and written examinations, critical analyses, and papers.

❖ Victorian Novel

Spring 2020

Credit Hours: 3

Course Code: DLA-523

Course Description

The Novel as an art form blossomed in the Nineteenth Century. France produced Stendhal, Honore de Balzac, and Gustave Flaubert. Herman Melville, Henry James, and Mark Twain emerged from the United States, and Russia gave the world Leo Tolstoy and Fyodor Dostoevsky. In England, the Victorian Age is seen as the great age of the novel. The period named after Queen Victoria (1837-1901), the longest reigning monarch in British history, produced a staggering number of novels, with estimates ranging from 40,000 to 60,000. Victorian novelists like Charles Dickens, Emily Bronte, Charlotte Bronte, George Eliot, and Thomas Hardy have come to enjoy international acclaim. They explored an array of subjects, themes, and ideas ranging from the social and political to the intensely personal, creating a dazzling array of male and female characters, many of whom are embedded in the collective unconscious of a readership unconfined by national boundaries.

This course will focus on three masterpieces. Hard Times (1854) by Charles Dickens, The Mill on the Floss, (1860) by George Eliot, and Tess of the D'Urbervilles (1891) by Thomas Hardy. The contexts in which they emerged – social, political, cultural, and ideological, will be systematically elaborated. The impact and significance of colonialism and the rise and expansion of empire on the Victorian novel will receive particularly close scrutiny. Many Victorian novels are celebrated for their portrayal of female protagonists who give expression to their rich inner lives, experiences, and passions, often in a constricting and confining social environment. The novels explore a range of themes including identity and the construction of a self, (male and female), memory and displacement, the consequences of the loss of faith, the relationship of materialism and the spirit, and “gentility and morality”.

Prominent among the issues that will receive consideration are the following: the Victorian novel and the construction of national identity, the factors responsible for the emergence and popularity of the novel, the distinctive features of early, ‘high’ and late Victorianism, what if anything binds these diverse novelists and brings them under one roof, the emergence of the ‘realist’ novel and the various flavors of realism, narrative technique, and the structure of the novels.

How did categories of gender, sexuality, and even personhood change in this vast new framework? How were the conventions of Victorian literature affected by the fact of imperial domination? And was the practice of imperialism itself shaped by the works that described, and sometimes critiqued, it? How did the Victorians imagine their era of globalization?

Learning Outcomes

- Students will emerge from this course with a heightened understanding of the distinctive contributions of Charles Dickens, George Eliot and Thomas Hardy in shaping and defining the sensibility of the Victorian age. Students should emerge from this course with the critical and analytical tools necessary to critique the novels of the principal writers of the Victorian Age.
- Students will manifest an understanding of the ways in which labels and periods are constructs which can enlarge as well as impede understanding. Students will demonstrate an understanding of why and how literary artists reflect, interrogate, and construct ‘the spirit of the age’

Course Content

- Hard Time, Charles Dickens
- The Mill on the Floss, George Eliot

- Critical Reading Material will be uploaded, assigned for pre reading, presentation or class discussion

RESEARCH & PROJECTS:

Moulvi, Z.F., Rashid, H. (Forthcoming) “The case of LDA City: how a public-private partnership fractured a farmer’s resistance”. Manuscript submitted for publication. N. Kirmani (Ed) ‘Marginalization, Contestation and Change in South Asian Cities’. OUP.

This paper provides an ethnographic account of an instance of land acquisition in seven revenue villages in the urban periphery of Lahore for the purposes of a mega-housing scheme. It questions static categories animating this discourse such as that of the ‘peasant’ and ‘resistance’. It foregrounds instead the diverse set of responses to acquisition and places these in the broader context of a rapid financialization of land in the city, and in the particular context of a peri-urban space.

Moulvi, Z.F. “Enclosing the River”. Master’s thesis, Duke University, 2014.

The project analyses how the induction of the river into a regime of property rights displaced alternative rights to the river. It traces this shift back to colonial interventions in fishery development in India and then proceeds to examine spaces for alternatives to the dominant property regime by identifying existing and historical practices of ‘common-ing’ by the adivasi (indigenous) communities. I argue for an understanding of commons not as ‘common property’ but as practices that generate certain politically and historically constituted rights and give birth to values on which struggles for alternatives to the status quo can take place.
